

Freedom House and partners, under our joint initiative United to Confront Hate-Motivated Violence in Ukraine, seek to improve Ukraine’s policies to prevent and respond to hate-motivated violence. Our efforts unite communities targeted with hate-motivated violence in a broad coalition aimed at monitoring, documenting, and analyzing hate-motivated crimes and incidents in Ukraine. Equipped with data gathered from both open sources and interviews, we develop and advocate for policies to more effectively tackle hate-motivated violence.

This Hate Monitor is a snapshot of monitoring, documentation, and verification of incidents by a network of 35 monitors across the country. The subject of the monitoring is incidents of hate-motivated violence and violence against events organized to promote the rights of communities targeted with hate-motivated violence.

Contextual information

This quarter was marked by troubling incidents of antisemitism in the Kyiv region. On October 17, about 100 representatives of right-wing radical and nationalist organizations staged a protest against Roma people living in Irpin, a suburb of Kyiv. Participants of the protest made discriminatory statements and calls for violence against the Roma population if they “do not apologize to the victims and the Ukrainian people” on their knees. Ukrainian human rights organizations condemned this incitement to hatred and appealed to law enforcement agencies to ensure public order and properly investigate incidents of hate-motivated violence.

Hate incidents targeting LGBT+ people

During the reporting period, isolated attacks on LGBT+ people were recorded in different cities of Ukraine. In Khmelnytskyi, an eighteen-year-old transgender girl’s hair and face were set on fire near a local club. In Lviv, dozens of right-wing radicals tried to disrupt a queer party in Club 151. In Kyiv, Maryna Herz, an open lesbian and former project coordinator of KyivPride was splashed with antiseptic liquid when she kissed her partner in public. Furthermore, right-wing radicals continue to call for attacks and incite hate among the population by publishing open appeals to hatred on social media.
